SLACKING DOWN IN BUSINESS IN MAY IS NOTED

Eighth Federal Reserve Report Gives Buyers' Caution as Reason—Has Effect Putting Brakes On Higher Prices

COAL SITUATION SHOWS SLIGHT CHANGE ANY PLACE

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, MO., May 31—While a slacking down in business activities in the Eighth Federal Reserve District was noted in the past month, fundamentally conditions remain sound, according to the monthly report of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank, issued today.

The present lull is considered by the more conservative business men as only temporary, the report asserts, and is due to unfavorable weather conditions and caution on the part of buyer's as a result of recent advances in prices.

Conditions in the South are relatively better than in the grain and stock raising areas, the report states.

"As contrasted with the preceding several months the volume of new buying was smaller, though the comparison with a year ago exhibits continued gains." the report declares. "Production of commodities held at the recent high levels and in a few instances new records were established, but a large portion of the goods turned out were for application on old orders. In the clothing, dry goods, boot and shoe, and drug and chemical lines future business is much heavier than at the corresponding seasons in 1922 and 1921.

It has had the effect of putting the brakes on the upward price movement and permitting a more even balance throughout industry. The general demand for commodities remain large and the public is filling its wants. There are numerous favorable factors which point to a continuance of good business, chief among which are moderate stocks universal employment of labor, high wages and an ample supply of banking credits. At no time in recent years have production and distribution of commodities kept more closely to actual consumption."

Replies to questionnaires, the report continues, show that business in the south is good, adding that "in the cotton region buying of merchandise of all sorts is on a more liberal scale and collections are in the main satisfactiry. The same is true of the tobacco country, where farmers are being paid for their crops, which they market through the cooperative associations."

Cool weather, accompanied in many localities by exressive precipitation, hampered farm operations, the report says, but "on the whole, however, preparation of the soil is well up to normal due to the unusually favorable weather for plowing last fall and winter. Some replanting cotton has been necessary, due to the light frosts and too abundant moisture. Pastures have been enersely benefited by the rains, and growing crops are making good progress, particularly winter wheat.

"Save for further slight weakening in prices, the coal situation underwent no change worthy of note. The demand for steaming coal has improved somewhat during the immediate past, and some screenings are being accumulated by large consumers. The demand for everything else, however, is extremely right.

"Railroads continue to report record freight loadings for this time of year.

"Reports relative to connections indicate a slight recession from the high efficiency of the preceding three month's."

GIBBONS SAYS HE KNOCKED VICTIM DOWN AT GARAGE DOOR

By Associated Press

HENDERSON, May 31.—Ollie Gibbons, convicted principal in the murder of Gus Noffsinger, coal mine manager, here last December, at the trial of Mrs. Noffsinger here today on the same charge testified that she urged him to commit the crime and that she made the first advances in their previous relations. Coming down to the night of the crime he said he was at the Noffsinger home when she gave him a note saying it was a rainy night and a good time to kill Noffsinger as few people were on the street.

Gibbons asserted he met Noffsinger on the street and got in Noffsinger's automobile. He intended to shoot as soon as he reached Noffsinger's garage but when he reached in the back of the car for an umbrella he located the hammer which he did not know was there. On an instant he changed his mind and used the hammer and when Noffsinger came out of the garage he hit him on the head. He started to run but Mrs. Noffsinger who, he said, had emerged from the house called him, seized the hammer while he was walking the fence to conceal his footprints, and he saw her strike her husband on the head. Gibbons is entirely self-confident on the stand.

BOONEWAY SWIMMING POOL MAY NOT OPEN THIS YEAR

Considerable inquiries have been made recently as to whether or not the Booneway Inn swimming pool will be made ready for use this summer. J. T. Alderson, manager of the Booneway, says he has not decided whether or not he will open it this season. In the event that it is opened he does not know yet whether or not it will be for the public.

From the large number of desires expressed recently for a public swimming pool it appears that such a recreational place is in demand. At present there are no adequate swimming places in or near Middlesboro and the opening of a public place would be hailed with delight by the lovers of the sport.

A THOUGHT

Go to now, ye that say, Today or tomorrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain; whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away. —Jas 4:13, 14.

HEAVEN makes sport of human affairs and the present hour gives no sure promise of the next.—Ovid.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE

Although yesterday was the day set apart as national Memorial Day, there was slight observance of it in Middlesboro. A few business places were closed, a few individuals were seen at the cemetery with baskets of flowers for their loved ones, but further than that there was no outward sign of commemorative service for the soldier dead—not even a flag flying.

Surely we honor our heroes. There was no section, either in the Civil War or the World War, more loyal than Southeastern Kentucky, no place from which came braver soldiers or more courageous warriors. We have our quota, and more, of soldier dead, too, men who gave their lives in sacrifice for ours.

Our trouble is merely indifference, lethargic indifference and a tendency to let the past take care of the past. Patriotism, hero worship, sentiment, have no place in our lives or in the every day business of the city. We are caught up in the maelstrom of commercialism which is, more and more, placing its stamp on America. To go on means death to idealism and all the noble standards that our race and our country have stood for. To turn back means to get out of step with what we call progress and commercial growth. What shall we do?

AFTE THEY DIE

Speaking of Abraham Lincoln one of the leading New York newspapers said editorially in its issue of May 19, 1860:

"The Republican convention at Chicago has nominated Abraham Lincoln of Illinois for President of the United States—a third-rate Western lawyer, poorer than poor Pierce. The contriver of the Republican party in this matter is a remarkable indication of a small intellect growing smaller. They passed over Seward, Chase and Banks, who are statesmen and able men, and they take a fourth-rate lecturer who cannot speak good grammar and who, to raise the wind, delivers his hackneyed, illiterate compositions at $200 apiece. Our readers will recollect that this peripathetic politician visited New York two or three months ago on his financial tour, when in return for the most unmitigated trash, interlarded with coarse and clumsy jokes, filled his empty pockets with dollars coined out of republican fanaticism."

Five days later a leading Philadelphia newspaper said, of Lincoln: "There is not in all history of his life any exhibition of intellectual ability and attainment fitting him for the high and responsible post for which he has been nominated. His coarse language, his illiterate style and his vulgar and vituperative personality in debate contrast very strongly with the elegance and classical oratory of the eminent senator from New York."

In wilder moments some of the leading papers and political harangguers called Lincoln a "freak," a "baboon who had escaped from the morasses of Illinois," a "vulgar clown" and a "low-bred village politician."

Lincoln, when he ran for the presidency, stood about as much ridicule and unmerited slander as any political candidate in our history. However, he looms greater and greater with the passing of years. His greatness lives on while most of the newspapers that vituperated him have died of dry rot.

You contrast Lincoln's standing in history with the things they said about him when he was alive. There never was a better illustration that the importance and historical worth of a man cannot be judged by the generation in which he lives.

It takes death and the perspective of time to "place" him properly. Most of the prominent people who rank highly now will be gone and forgotten within half a century. And the ones who survive time's sifting process and emerge truly great will be, in many cases, individuals who are underrated today.

The ultimate position of Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt in history, for instance, will not be known for at least 50 years.

What is the distinction between dropping and replacing a ball? Is it permissible to drop a ball when the rules state it should be replaced and vice versa?

There is a decided distinction between dropping and replacing a ball. When the rules call for a ball being replaced it should be done by being placing the ball carefully in the exact spot it occupied before being lifted otherwise disturbed. If it was lifted for some reason, a marker should have been placed designating the exact spot. It is directly contrary to the rules to drop a ball when it calls for same to be replaced, and equally wrong to replace a ball that should be dropped.

A considerable amount of dirt to be used in making repairs was deposited at the edge of the fairway one side of the accumulation of dirt bordering on the fairway. Player's second shot causes his ball to lodge in the dirt nearest the fairway. Do the rules give the player the right to lift and drop the ball without penalty and should the ball be dropped in the rough or on the fairway?

Player has a right to lift the ball and drop same without penalty, the dirt being considered unkeep of the course. The player is entitled to drop the ball on the fairway not nearer the hole and as near as possible to where it lay.

What is the penalty if your caddie carelessly throws down your bags of clubs for some reason, and in so doing moves your opponent's ball while it is at rest?

The rule covering this point states that in match play such an act on the part of your caddie loses you the hole, but in medal play no penalty is incurred, your opponent replacing the ball where it lay prior to the act of carelessness on the part of the caddie.

I am not quite sure whether I should send this bill to you or your husband. I wish you would in the future tell me whether I shall send these bills to the house or the office.

We are very much flattered that you have liked us well enough to give so many little luncheons in the hotel instead of distributing your patronage among other places in the city.

Believe me, Mrs. Prescott, we appreciate your kindness in bringing your friends here and because of this we have deducted 10 per cent from our regular prices and are only charging you, as you will see by inclosed bill, sixty-seven dollars and twenty cents for the four lunches and seven teas given last month.

Most sincerely yours,
Alice Statson, Auditor.

Mr John Alden Prescott from the Thomas Florist Co.,
To one basket flowers, $10.00.

Notation by Leslie on this bill: "This came with my other bills and I opened it through mistake. You see the Mr. might easily be mistaken for Mrs.. The florist company also must have made a mistake for I have received no flowers.

LESLIE.

TOMORROW: Leslie Prescott's secret letter—A confession of love and trust.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

MATTER OF COURSES

By Berton Braley

I'M off of pork, I'm tired of beef,
I'm off of all potatoes;
I lunch upon a lettuce leaf,
I dine on stewed tomatoes.
But—gee, that tenderloin looks great,
I guess perhaps I'll try it,
Just put a little on my plate,
It's awful hard to diet.

Fritters I really shouldn't touch,
Still one or two won't harm me,
Scalloped potatoes!—they have such
Ability to charm me,
That maybe I'll try just a few:
They're fine, I can't deny it,
They're fattening I know, but who
Can stand a rigid diet?

Ice cream and coffee—no, ah no,
I mustn't, well—I shouldn't:
Still as you seem to urge me so,
I'll take some—gosh, who wouldn't?
In fact, with no more ifs and buts,
Though doctors may decry it,
I'll go the route from soup to nuts:
Tomorrow I will diet.

FOLLOW, FOLLOW!

Mine eyes are blurred with gazing
On the madnesses of men,
And I've lost the clue to music
In the clamor of this den.
There are vistas in the sunset
There are murmurs on the wind
That are calling me to follow,
Follow, follow till I find.
It may be in Atlantis
In hushed halls beneath the sea.
Or a lonely upland cottage
May hold peace and joy for me.
And whatever hands may hold me
And whatever winds may blow,
I have flung my heart before me
And it calls my soul to go.

Make THE Backyard Pay

ALL SUMMER GREENS

A peculiar vegetable from the other side of the world which shares with Swiss chard the function of furnishing "summer" greens in the New Zealand spinach. It is not a spinach at all, although used in the same manner. Seed of New Zeland spinach should not be sown before May 1 or later, when the ground becomes warm, as it will not germinate while the ground an the weather remain chilly.

Unlik the true spinach it is a long-season vegetable and remains in bearing until fall. And this stranger from the Antipodes makes a strong growth, sometimes attaining a spread of from six to eight feet. It needs plenty of room and the plants should be set two feet apart in rows three feet apart. Both the stems and the leaves are brittle and succulent and are not affected by heat which quickly sends the ordinary spinach spinning up to seed and destroys its usefulness in the garden.

The New Zeland spinach is a relative of the ice plant often grown for ornament and the seed is much slower to germinate than that of the true spinach, sometimes taking three weeks to appear if the weather is cool. But with hot weather it makes a rapid growth and when well grown more than a half a peck of leaves per plant may be picked from time to time during the summer. The tips of the leaves are the tenderest.

Unlike the true spinach, the leaves are picked instead of pulling up the entire plant.

The "greens" when cooked precisely in the same manner as spinach have much the same flavor as the better known vegetables now so largely grown.

"WHITE PLAGUE" WARS WITH BOLSHEVISM ON RELIGION IN EUROPE

ERIE, Pa., May 29.—Tuberculosis is joining Bolshevism in a gigantic war on religion in crushed and bleeding Central Europe.

Trailing in starvation's wake, it is exacting an appalling toll among the populace on Christianity's firing line.

Such is the pathetic picture Michael Cardinal Faulhaber, arch-bishop of Munich, painted in an interview here.

Into monasteries, convents and missions where hungry women and children come begging for bread, the white plague—like a thief in the night—is sneaking.

"Our priests and nuns and the other religious workers, already slowly dying from malnutrition, fall easy victims to this dread disease" explains his eminence

"Thousands have contracted it. Thousands more are suffering from softening of the bones owing to lack of proper food Operations are out of question because of prohibitive costs.

No Work Available

"Other thousands are sacrificing their scanty morsels to hordes that storm their doors pleading for something to eat. They labor on indefatigably, without thought of themselves, until they're no longer able to remain on their feet.

"So, too with the little children in the orphanages. And with men and women who are roaming the street crying for work But there is no work to give them

"In the midst of all this poverty, disease and distress and materialistic philosophy of Bolshevism is certain to appeal Bolshevism, however, is easier to combat than the plague. That we cannot stave off without aid from the outside.

"Only the generosity of other nations can save us. Your people have been very kind to us And I know they shall be equally as kind throughout the dark days we have yet to go through.

"We appeal for no alms—merely a 'lift,' as you Americans put it Some day we hope to pay our debt to the last mark.

"I have come to the United States to express my country's appreciation for what you have done toward leading us out of the chaos | My visit is the realization of my life's most cherished ambition.

Pleased With America

"Even during the war," he continues, "when I was a chaplain at the front, I was impressed with the high regard our troops had for your soldiers. We found our most courageous foe our kindest friend.

"With great expectation I set foot upon your soil. Nor have I been disappointed. I feel as though I were in another world."

The cardinal is one of the most distinguished theologians of modern times. From his pen have come many of the better known works on exegtic and homiletic nature.

Despite his profound scholarship, he is remarkably democratic. Cardinal Faulhaber cleverly circumvented an attempt to kiss his ring. He preferred the American way of shaking hands.

His face was wreathed in a pleasant smile. But a look of sadness displaced it as he told of the misery of his people.

His eminence got along splendidly without the assistance of an interpreter. He speaks excellent English.

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT DEFENDS SUPREME COURT

Reviews Court's Actions During Civil War and Reconstruction Days—No Direct Answer to Proposals to Curb Power

OCCASION IN UNVEILING MONUMENT TO CHASE

CINCINNATI, O., May 30.—Attacks made by "radical Republicans" on the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in Civil War and reconstruction days were reviewed by Chief Justice Taft here today with the comment that the verdict of the country in retrospect had been in favor of the position maintained by the court and against the attitude assumed by its critics

Speaking at the unveiling of a monument to Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, Justice Taft declared that while the highest Court undoubtedly had made mistakes in Chase's time, and at other times, the effect of its record as a whole had been to reaffirm the sound foundations upon which it was built.

The Chief Justice made no direct reference to proposals recently made in Congress to curb the power of the court, but he recalled that bills proposing to abolish the Court's right to declare the laws of Congress unconstitutional were introduced just after the Civil War and were defeated.

"During the incumbency of Chief Justice Chase, "said Justice Taft," popular feeling was strongly aroused against the Court. From time to time, by reason of its jurisdiction and its proper exercise, the Court can not help becoming the storm patrol of politics. It is the head of the system of Federal Courts established avowedly to avoold the local prejudice which non-residents may encounter in State Courts a function often likely to ruffle the sensibilities of the communities, the possibility to whose prejudice is thus recognized and avoided. More than this, the Court's duty to ignore the acts of Congress or of the State legislatures, if out of line with the fundamental law of the nation, inevitably throws it as an obstruction across the path of the then majority who have enacted the invalid legislation. The stronger the majority, and the more intense its partisan feeling, the less likely is it to regard constitutional limitations upon its power, and the more likely is it to enact laws of questionable validity. It is convincing evidence of the sound sense of the American people in the long run and their love of civil liberty and its constitutional guaranties, that, in spite of hostility thus frequently engendered, the Court has lived with its powers unimpaired until the present day.

"The assassination of Lincoln stirred the passion of the Northern people and threw power into the hands of the Radical element of the Republican party in Congress. Conflict with Lincoln's successor quickly ensued and a policy of radical reconstruction followed, which we can be reasonably sure would have been spared the South had Mr. Lincoln lived. With a two-thirds majority in each House, the Republican party leaders brooked no opposition, and when that which had been done in due course came before the Court for consideration of its validity, the attitude of those leaders toward the Court became one of suspicion and resentment. Until one refreshes his recollection of that period, he can hardly realize how far the radical Republicans in Congress went in their effort to oust the Court of its jurisdiction. They were afraid that the Court would pronounce their reconstruction measures invalid. They were stirred to this fear by the decision in ex parte Milligan, in which the Court refused to recognize the power of the President in time of war to direct a Military Commission to try for treason and sentence to death a civilian in a state not invaded by the enemy and where the civil courts were functioning. For fear that the Courts might hold invalid the work of such Commissions when organized under the reconstruction acts by military governors in the Southern States, Congress took the case of McArdle, presenting the question, from the Court's consideration, abruptly, after it had been argued and submitted, by repeal of its jurisdiction In the heat of the feeling against the Court, bills were proposed limiting its power to declare laws invalid by a majority, and there were serious proposals made to abolish this power of the Court altogether. The personal attacks made upon the Court by the party press were severe and unmeasured. This was the atmosphere in which Chief Justice Chase lived duting his judicial service

"The verdict of the country in retrospect as between the fever heat of the Radical Republicans in those tempestuous times against constitutional hindrance, on the one hand, and the restraining decisions of the Court, on the other, is with the Court. The people now are glad that the guaranties of personal liberty were maintained by the Court against the partisan zeal of the then majority. The Court survived the inevitable attacks upon its jurisdiction then, as it had survived them so many times before The storm during Chief Justice Chase's term was succeeded by a judicial calm of twenty-five years.

The Railroads get nothing for the Baggage Cars they haul

When you are packing your trunk for a business or pleasure trip, remember that the railroads of America undertake to haul your baggage, to the amount of 150 pounds, without any charge whatever; that in order to do this for you, they must provide space in which to transport this baggage and the employees to handle and care for it.

On some of the smaller railroads, revenue is earned thru a doubling up of the baggage with the mail and express shipments, but on practically every thru trunk line in the United States, one or more baggage cars are necessary to handle this freight. Remember, in your consideration and discussion of railroad problems, that it is costing the railroads of America enormous sums each year to render this service and that these expenditures represent a direct drain on railroad revenues absorbed by the carriers for your convenience.

Once You've Put

STANOCOLA Polarine MOTOR OIL

In Your Motor

and given it a test, you will not be satisfied with any other motor oil. Polarine is made in one of the world's greatest refineries, from the heart of specially-selected "crudes"—distilled, refined and filtered to just the proper grade of oiliness.

It is transported from the refineries to your dealer's tanks and dispensed by him with such care that you may be assured of its purity, regardless of whether you buy it in bulk or in packages.

Ask your dealer to consult the chart of recommendations and tell you just what grade of Polarine to use. After you have done this, the simple recipe for motor satisfaction is to watch your quantity and have your crank case drained every six or seven hundred miles and refilled with Polarine; then stick to the grade the chart has recommended.

CROWN Gasoline

is made and dispensed with the same care as Polarine. There is just as much difference in the quality of gasolines as there is in the quality of motor oils. Better stick to the standard and use Crown Gasoline.

BRADNER MAKES APPEAL TODAY FOR SCHOOLS

Urges Kiwanians to Give Support in Raising Taxes to Get Better Schools—A. M. Kinnaird Chairman Today

H. H. OVERTON GIVES REPORT ON COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVE

The chief feature of today's Kiwanis Club meeting was an impromptu talk by J. W. Bradner on school conditions. Mr. Bradner began by paying a compliment to the splendid way in which the board of education had spread the $100,000 bond issue over the building of five schools, but before he was through he had warmed up into a glowing description of school needs.

Mr. Bradner said that, with the added expense of caring for five extra schools next year, the board had a budget practically the same size as last year's, and that they were about the end of the rope, financially speaking, unless the council came to their aid and boosted assessments again. He went over the improvements in the school here during the past year, showing how many more had passed this year and that Middlesboro High school was in the accredited list for the first time. He said that failures in the past had been caused by over-crowded conditions and that fifty-nine per cent of the children now in school are from two to eight years too old for their grade.

The superintendent finished by saying that it was bad economy to save money by inferior schools and he urged the Kiwanis Club to use its influence with the council to see that the assessment this year be at least six million dollars

A. M. Kinnaird was chairman of the program today. He introduced two visitors, J. W. Chawkly and E. J. Prescott of Big Stone Gap, who invited the local club to their city July Fourth. The former said a few words on the national park, declaring that he was ready to compromise and have two parks.

The following report on the Community Chest was read by H. H. Overton:

Officers and Members of the Kiwanis Club: The committee appointed to conduct the Community Chest Campaign, desires to submit this as a final report:

The total amount of subscriptions up to the present time is $17395.05.

A number of subscriptions are out yet, and they will probably be sent in which will run this up to over $18,000.

The number of people subscribing to the fund were 525

All the committee did wonderful work, and the cooperation was splendid, and there is nothing but the highest praise for all citizens participating in this drive

The committee recommends that a permanent committee be appointed to handle these funds and to look after the distribution for the ensuing year. We suggest that this committee consist of three members of the Kiwanis Club, and that they invite the cooperation of all the churches, and other organizations participating in this drive, and request that cahc appoint one director from its organization, and that the entire board of directors meet and incorporate under the Kentucky statute.

The fidelity and accuracy and method by which this fund is handled this year will go far toward influencing the success of this movement in the future.

We hope the club will select its best material to administer this fund, and carry on this work.

Many thanks to the club for its hearty cooperation.

E. S Helburn, chairman: H. H, Overton, secretary: P M Parsons.

The Club voted to continue the same committee in office and also gave a vote of thanks to everyone who had any part in assuring the success of the drive.

International Convention Notes

Actual figures show that the Atlanta Registration committee registered slightly under 3000 Kiwanians in 3 hours and 10 minutes the first day of the convention.

True to Kiwanis custom the International convention is featuring its singing. Jules Brazil, the internationally famous Scotch-Canadian song leader and entertainer leads the convention singing, appearing in kilties and wearing a monocle. Jules, with irrepressible wit and enthusiasm keeps the convention's spirits at high tide.

An exhibit covering the various departments of Kiwanis activities located in the lobby of the headquarters hotel graphically furnished an idea of what Kiwanis is doing.

Many interesting musical organizations are here from all parts of the country. Among them the Highland Pipers from Toronto, wearing kilties and playing their Scotch bag-pipes. The Alabama Boys Industrial school band from Birmingham, Ala., the 24th Regiment band from Ft. Benning, Columbus, Ga., the original Kiwanis Glee club of Houston, Texas and the Kiwanis band from Sidney, Ohio, and Asheville, N. C.

The Extension Dept. report the fact that 238 new clubs have joined the Kiwanis circle since the last annual International convention.
